An exquisite gemstone comes to life

71 million years in the making, Ammonite fossils were preserved over time with the perfect combination of minerals, pressure, and temperature. Ammonite shells were naturally created into the iridescent, brilliant, and exotic gem-quality material used for Ammolite today. The natural wonder of Ammolite and its history has captivated the world.

A kaleidoscope of color, from natural strokes of deep blues and luscious violets, to sparkling green and fiery reds.

A captivating gemstone with its color, brilliance and clarity.

Ammolite received gemstone designation by CIBJO in 1981 and is the last of the gemstones accepted in the past 300 years.

Iniskim: Breathing new life into the Ammolite industry

We are sharing our passion and vision of Ammolite with the world. With extensive experience in showcasing premium and authentic Ammolite on a global scale, we are proud to be a leading source of this truly unique gemstone.

We are ready to colour the world with our ethically sourced gemstones, hand specimens, Baculites and Ammonite fossils, thoughtfully chosen and cared for by our passionate team.

As a proud member of the International Colored Gemstone Association (ICA), we also received ICA's Ethical Member Accreditation recognition. Our promise is to help advance the Ammolite industry forward in the areas of ethical mining and sourcing, and responsible, sustainable trading.

At the heart of Iniskim's operations,
